

The burst of a supernova – poem by Biya Ahmed

1. She was the stars, the stars that hide
2. That seem insignificant from afar
3. She was a hidden phenomenon
4. Yet, no one would know, of her ethereal beauty
5. And her twinkling mind because they never sought to see
6. Ludicrously holding onto the concept of pretty things,
7. Foolishly feeding into their materialistic temptation
8. Oh, she was more than beautiful
9. Her voice as tender as honey
10. With waterlilies lining her cheekbones
11. And desire hidden midst her cherry eyes
12. But what you could never witness
13. Was her magnificent demise
14. A magnificent burst
15. As she was a supernova to behold
16. And when her stardust scattered the universe
17. And entered your veins
18. Only then, you would see
19. She was infinite;
20. Ambrosia tangled within her soul, and moondust littered along her smile
21. She was all you lacked
22. But you could never witness, such a timeless beauty
23. Because you failed to escape
24. Aphrodite's hypnotizing grasp.
25. People like you, foolishly chasing empty hopes
26. With stars in your eyes, and depthless hearts
27. People like you, were the reason
28. no one could see her beauty
29. And made her every day
30. A hell in disguise
